

HUT LOG BOOKS

OF THE NEW ZEALAND BACKCOUNTRY

AN ARCHIVE INVENTORY

Compiled by Bill Keir

INTRODUCTION

Back country hut log books are valuable historical records. Several New Zealand archives hold significant collections of them, but archiving has been haphazard. Many are missing or lost through casual practices or accidental destruction. Sometimes the set of those of a particular hut is spread around separate archives.

This inventory is intended to present the available information in a form that is useful to researchers. It is by no means complete, for reasons given below, and its coverage period is prior to about 2000, with a few exceptions.

There are probably many hut log books in archives that are not identified in the catalogues because they are buried in collections of correspondence and business papers of mountain and tramping clubs, national parks, government departments such as Conservation, Forest Service, and Lands and Survey, and even private individuals. Some of these collections are huge and catalogue search tools will not capture the hut log books within them. A laborious physical search at the archive is the only way to find them. Some examples of these collections are given in Appendix 1. Many hut log books, especially from 1990 onwards, are still held in the offices of their owners awaiting archiving, and not systematically indexed. Some known examples are listed in Appendix 2. Of course, some books of recent date are still active in the huts.

Some items listed in the inventory are not strictly log books of backcountry huts but are listed because of their association with the backcountry. Examples are National Park visitor books, roadside intention books, and log books of club base huts in townships and villages.

The inventory is confined mainly to recreational huts. Excluded are most private mustering and grazier huts, and some Forest Service Huts (now owned by the Department of Conservation). However, some huts in these categories are included because they are open to the public and have long been used by recreationists as well as their owners.

A gap in the date coverage of a particular hut means that those log books have not yet been found in any archive.

I gratefully acknowledge the help of many archivists in the various institutions. This inventory is a work in progress. New information or corrections can be sent to the compiler for inclusion in future editions.

APPENDIX 2

EXAMPLES OF HUT LOG BOOK COLLECTIONS KNOWN TO BE HELD BY THEIR OWNERS BUT NOT SYSTEMATICALLY CATALOGUED:

Many offices of the Department of Conservation have stored collections of hut log books. They are usually available for viewing and copying on site by arrangement. Some examples are:

Arthur's Pass Visitor Centre: Collection dating from the 1980s.

Southland Conservancy Office Invercargill: About 500 log books dating from the 1960s.

Tongariro National Park (several offices and field centres): About 350 log books dating from the 1920s to 2011. An itemised list is available.

West Coast Conservancy – Hokitika Area Office: Log books from 70 huts in Westland dating from the 1960s.

Canterbury Conservancy Office Christchurch: Collection in an office in CBD earthquake red zone – restricted access as at October 2011.

Waikato Area Offices – Hamilton and Te Kuiti: Small collections.

Wellington Hawkes Bay Conservancy Office, Wellington: Log books from huts in the Tararua, Ruahine, Kaweka and Rimutaka Forest Parks.

Nelson Marlborough Conservancy: Collections in some area offices. List being compiled as at November 2011.

Gisborne Whakatane Area Office, Gisborne: Small collection. Itemised list available.

Glenorchy Ranger Office: Small collection.

Wanaka Area Office: Collection details being compiled as at November 2011.

APPENDIX 3

EXAMPLES OF ARCHIVED BACKCOUNTRY RECORDS NOT RELATED TO SPECIFIC HUTS BUT CONTAINING USEFUL REFERENCES TO THEM:

The Canterbury Mountaineering Club collection in the Canterbury Museum includes unpublished trip journals, diaries and photo albums covering 1920-1950.

The New Zealand Alpine Club collections in the Canterbury Museum and the Hocken Library include useful unpublished manuscripts about alpine regions.

FOOTNOTES

1. Archives New Zealand, Christchurch, and the Canterbury Museum, report that their archives survived the 2010-2011 earthquakes safely. As at September 2011 both institutions are again open to the public. Archives New Zealand has temporary restrictions on access to some items.
2. Defiance Hut Visitor Book 1914-1930 has restricted access, but can be viewed as a complete digital copy at: www.archives.govt.nz/docs/pdfs/archway/defiance%20Hut.pdf
3. In 1974 the National Parks Authority issued sample copies of a new design of hut book for trial placement in selected huts for three months or until full.
